Tord Boontje

An elegant re-discovery of the art of concealment

This magnificent wardrobe is a masterful re-interpretation of the classical wooden cabinet and the art of secret compartments, both typical of the 18th Century. At the touch of a hidden panel, the main doors open and, on finding and pressing an ingeniously hidden button, the central panel is released, revealing a series of 9 small drawers.

L'Armoire's beauty lies in the geometry of its 38 seamlessly joined, curving facets of superbly matched Cocobolo veneer. The rules of traditional cabinet making are furthermore followed, with the drawers made from solid precious wood, in this case Padouk, a deep red coloured timber.
